VILLARD'S GENEROUS ATTEMPT TO SAVE HIS BROKERS.

The Great Financier is Not Insolvent—How Gould Acquired Control of the Atchison Road—A Scheme to Christianize Christianity—Affairs in South America.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Nov. 18.—This evening as hundreds of people were going to church a monster snake crawled out of a sewer at the intersection of Calhoun and Montgomery, two of the principal streets of this city. Women fainted, boys and girls cried in fright, and men trembled. The serpent, as soon as it emerged, glared at the crowd and slowly started off. It was pursued and shot, and when measured it was found to be 16 feet in length and nine inches in diameter. When it was known to be dead thousands of people gathered to view the reptile and the police had to clear the streets.

Argentine Finances.

BUENOS AYRES, Nov. 18.—President Pellegrini, replying to a deputation, declared he would never authorize suspension of redemption of the public debt. His aim was to develop the resources of the country, and he hoped a sound, economic state of affairs would soon be re-established.

O'Donovan Rossa Insolvent.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—A receiver has been appointed for O'Donovan Rossa's paper, United Irishmen, on a judgment for $175.

Methodist Missionary Appropriations.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—The Methodist missionary committee appropriated $56,000 for Japan, $16,000 for Corea, and $6,000 for Lower California. This finished the appropriations for foreign countries. The entire amount appropriated was $540,907. The amount remaining which they are entitled to expend was $25,446.

Miners for Wellington.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 17. — The steamer Wellington, Capt. Salte, sailed Saturday evening for Nanaimo, taking up about 50 miners, who go to work in the Dunsmuir mine at Wellington.

TO CHRISTIANIZE CHRISTIANITY

Liberal Association Formed, With Professor Swing at Its Head.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—The first session of the Liberal Christian Alliance concluded its labors to-day. Professor Swing, of Chicago, was elected president. The constitution sets forth that, believing a better and more spiritual interpretation of Christianity is everywhere needed, and that there ought to be more fellowship and union in spirit and work among the Liberal Christians, an association is formed for the purpose of promoting these ends. It is to be undenominational, and is to be undogmatical, on the rights of private judgment in interpretation, and the right of private conscience in action and religion is not to be questioned. It shall in no way disturb either the independent or existing denominational relations of churches. The association invites the fellowship of all in sympathy with its ends.

GOULD'S GRASP.

Acquires Control of the Atchison Road—How it Was Done.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 18.—It was ascertained through a trustworthy source that Jay Gould had secured a controlling interest in the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad. The mileage thus acquired adds some 7000 to 9000 miles to the 40,000 miles of railroad Mr. Gould previously controlled. Baring Bros., bankers, who are now in such bad shape, have been largely interested in Santa Fe holdings, and it is believed by many persons that that stock has been one cause of their present trouble. When the celebrated blanket mortgage was placed on the Santa Fe system, the Barings handled large blocks of the bonds and guaranteed their payment. Since then the stock has declined to such an extent that many of the foreign holders have thrown the stocks back on the Barings, and this has as much as the South American troubles caused their financial troubles. Saturday the Santa Fe was quoted as low as 17, but it is known that Santa Fe sold in London at 12, but that the figure was not posted. Gould secured most of his Atchison stock at an average price of 22 or 23 cents. The principal reason for this latest purchase was to secure a short line to Chicago for his Southwestern roads.

It is hard to comprehend, without the study of a map, what this vast consolidation means to the country at large and to competing lines. This puts under Gould's control a line from Chicago to New Orleans, to the City of Mexico, to San Francisco and to Portland, Or., and back to Chicago, with a complete network of railroads crossing and recrossing this enclosure in every direction, touching every city of any importance. It is understood also that Gould bought the Texas division of the St. Louis, Arkansas and Texas when it was recently sold and bought in by alleged bondholders.

HENRY VILLARD

Coming Home Soon—Not Insolvent—He Tried to Save His Brokers.

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Villard left Berlin for Freiberg yesterday, where his daughter Helen, a young lady of 19, is lying dangerously ill. Villard, accompanied by Kriesman, formerly United States consul-general, and a well-known Berlin financier, sails in a few days for New York, but is far from being insolvent. The Deutsche bank is a heavy loser. Last Sunday night Villard received the first intimation from his brokers, Decker, Howell & Co., that they were insolvent. They cabled that they must have $325,000 or go to the wall. He spent Monday morning telegraphing and raising money, and before 3 o'clock transferred the amount asked for to the brokers, but the money arrived half an hour too late. Villard, however, is credited here with having made a generous attempt to save them.

Villard's real name, as is well known, is Hilgard. He is the son of a chief justice in Bavaria. He changed his name and went to America on account of some pranks when a student at Heidelberg.

THE BARINGS' TROUBLES.

All the Banks Proffer Aid—How the Barings Were Enticed Into the Boom.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—When the news of the Barings' troubles reached New York yesterday Wall Street was struck dumb with amazement.

"If Baring Bros. had failed outright," said a prominent Wall street broker, "it would have paralyzed the stock exchanges of the world and crippled the commerce of every port. There is no house in the world which has such vast and far-reaching commercial connections. The commercial world was appalled when it heard the news from England. The Bank of England itself was not a stronger financial bulwark than this great old house, and if the news had flashed over the cable that the bank itself had gone to smash it could scarcely have created a more profound sensation or have proved a greater shock to the confidence of the entire financial world on both sides of the Atlantic."

The following explanation of the cause of Baring Bros.' trouble and the financial situation abroad was obtained from a gentleman of prominence in this city who is in the swim in Wall street, and who recently returned from a visit to London on an important financial mission, and who is in a position which peculiarly fits him to understand the condition of Baring Bros.:

"The whole trouble with Baring Bros., appears to be that they have gone too deeply into what are called Argentines. They have overloaded themselves with the stocks and securities of the Argentine Republic, which have been issued to an enormous extent. The whole country has been overdone in the way of internal improvements, and this forced boom has led to the establishment of some of the largest financial institutions in the world. Buenos Ayres has one bank which is larger than any other bank in the world except the Bank of England. It is much larger than the Bank of France. A man named Sanford, who is a member of the firm of Hale & Co., of Buenos Ayres, has done more than any other man toward helping along this Argentine boom. He is one of the greatest and most successful promoters of financial enterprises of his time. He is a most remarkable man, and one of the most plausible talkers I ever met.

The influence which Sanford came to acquire over Lord Revelstoke, head of the Baring Bros. house is one of the most curious things in financial history. Lord Revelstoke is the embodiment of the head man of a business, a conservative, shrewd, cool Englishman. He comes from a generation of financiers. Sanford seems to have fascinated Lord Revelstoke, and Baring Bros. have gone into Argentine securities in what is now seen to have been a reckless way. It is probable that about £15,000,000 or $75,000,000 has been locked up by the Barings in South American securities. Nearly all their entire obligations of £17,000,000 or more are in Argentine railways, water-works, harbor improvements, and national and state bonds. Industrial schemes in the Argentines have been placed by the Barings amounting to $1,000,000,000. These securities are held very largely in England, probably 50 per cent. France and Germany hold the other half.

The distrust in financial circles was not entirely dispelled by yesterday's relief of the Barings. The general feeling is that it is still too early to conclude that all is right. It is known that a number of minor firms have been under a heavy strain. It is also improbable that confidence will be restored until the position of the Barings toward Argentine financial matters becomes clearer.

DISASTROUS TYPHOON.

Two Tugs and a Warship Sunk With Their Crews.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16.—Captain Bash, of the barkentine Modoc, writes that severe equatorial gales were encountered and when 200 miles off Loucha island the typhoon became rampant and a tremendous storm ensued. Two tugs and one man-of-war were lost in the same tempest and with them perished the crews. His own craft was nearly swamped a dozen times. The cabin and forward houses were both full of water and nearly all of the sails were destroyed. By some strange luck the Modoc weathered the typhoon, when vessels twice her size were wrecked.

HOME AND FOREIGN.

PARNELL DENIES THAT HE WILL RESIGN THE LEADERSHIP.

The Report Emanates from His Opponents—How the Serpent Went Down—Society Circles in Paris Caught by a Confidence Woman—How She Extorted Money.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The survivors of the warship Serpent say she struck the rock at 10 o'clock at night, while running nine knots an hour. The weather was very thick and the wind blowing hard. A tremendous swell was on. After striking she thumped on the rocks half an hour, and then slid off and sunk. The officers remained on the bridge to the last. The crew, by order of the captain, took to the rigging. The survivors were members of the lifeboat crew, and had on life belts. These aided in saving them.

Has Parnell Resigned.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Dublin Express says: Parnell has informed prominent men in the Irish Parliamentary party that he will not lead the party in parliament during the coming session. Sexton has been appointed to move in parliament a Parnellite amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne. This implies that he will lead the Parnellites during the absence of their chief.

NEWARK, N.J., Nov. 18.—John Dillon, M.P., was asked if he thought Parnell had resigned the leadership of his party. He said that as the author of the report was the Dublin Express, the organ of the landlords and all the opponents of the Irish parliamentary party, he considered the report absurd.

A London special to-night says that Parnell denies that he will retire from the leadership of the Irish party on account of the O'Shea trial.

MANCHESTER, Nov. 18.—Manufacturing furriers have advanced the price of sealkins 60 per cent. An impression prevails that the recent low prices will never return.

CANADIAN BOODLERS.

A Scandal That Involves a Member of Parliament and a Minister.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—A Quebec special asserts that Laurier, the opposition leader, is in possession of proofs of a boodle scheme, besides which the Canadian Pacific scandals of 1873 are insignificant, and that he will spring them at the next session of parliament. It is alleged that boodle was paid to Thomas McGreevy, a member of parliament, by the contractor of the Quebec and Esquimalt docks for information from the public works department, of which his bosom friend, Sir Hector Langevin, is minister. It is said that friends of the government are urging the ministers to dissolve parliament before Laurier can present and prove his charges. Unless this is done Langevin and McGreevy will probably be expelled.

THE CAPITAL.

His Excellency Will Not Interfere with the Verdict of the Law.

OTTAWA, Nov. 18.—His Excellency the Governor-General has carefully reviewed the evidence taken in the case of W. W. Blanchard, now in Sherbrooke jail and sentenced to be hanged on the 12th December for the murder of one Calkins, as well as the report of the judge who tried the case. The memorandum of Sir John Thompson to the council recommended that the law should be allowed to take its course, and Lord Stanley has come to the conclusion that justice has been done and he cannot interfere. Blanchard will be hanged on the 12th December within the precincts of Sherbrooke jail. On December 19th, Remi Lamontagne, for the murder of his brother-in-law, will be hanged in the same place. His Excellency, for the same reasons will not interfere with the sentence. Two other cases have got to be disposed of, that of Day in the Welland jail for the murder of one of his wives, having had two, and the Morans case, which was before the supreme court on Saturday.

A VERY FINE SCHEME.

A Beautiful Young Lady Works a Crowd of Wealthy Admirers.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—A few months since a strikingly handsome young lady made her appearance in this city, and her marvelous costumes, her dashing equipage, the atmosphere of patrician independence that surrounded her aroused public curiosity and finally public admiration. A stately, powdered footman answered summons at the door and there was a corps of household servants, usually considered to be in the service of royalty alone. The lady was known as the Princess Redavitz. She was regarded as free from all entanglement of matrimonial alliances and as without any hindering accompaniment of parental supervision. In fact neither husband nor parent was visible in the commodious house, or among the army of attaches that were constantly busying themselves in adding to the comfort and pleasure of the much envied princess.

These rumors and the sudden desire for knowledge that the mercantile world of Paris showed resulted in casting the delicious princess into prison and unearthing a scheme of deliberate swindling and confidence operations that is almost as attractive in its audacity as the fair one who was the principal figure.

The so-called Princess Redavitz was possessed of both a husband and a mother. Her powdered footman, who kept such a jealous eye over her safety and so admirably measured the intentions and gullability of her callers, was none other than her lawfully wedded spouse, and the unassuming housekeeper, whose presence was rather felt than seen, filled the relationship of mother.

[illegible] was not only necessary, but highly necessary. She made the acquaintance of certain money lenders and under the influence and spell of her beautiful daughter induced them to loan money on "set up" jewelry.

In one instance a swain advanced 30,000 francs for stuff worth about 500 francs, but finally an ex-officer of the gend'armes made a £540 advance on a diamond necklace, which he had the poor taste to submit to an appraiser of impartial and experienced wisdom, and discovered it to be worth at the upper-most notch, the discouraging figure of £10. The royal family now languishes in jail awaiting trial.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

BY ANNA KATHERINE GREEN.

CHAPTER XVII.

A SUDDEN RELEASE.

It was evident that Julius Molesworth must go to prison. If Mildred Farley had been murdered, he was the man to whom her death was due. To be sure the case was not as strong against him as it had been against some criminals Mr. Gryce had known. But then a case of poisoning is always more impenetrable than one in which the knife or pistol has been used. Poison keeps its own secrets, and only by the surrounding circumstances can we judge whether the victim raised the glass to his own lips or had it forced upon him by another. But here were circumstances of a direct and telling nature which pointed to murder; for upon what other theory than a skilfully premeditated plan to conceal his crime can we account for the story told by Dr. Molesworth of his finding the girl in a dying condition on a certain stoop, when the real facts of the case show that she perished in his phaeton and that the bottle was flung out and broken on the sidewalk merely to give color to the statement he intended to make. Only a coward of the basest stamp would resort to such a lie and such an action; and Dr. Molesworth had no appearance of being a coward. On the contrary he had every sign of being a deep-thinking, strong-acting and self-reliant man. To prison therefore he must go, and without delay.

Mr. Gryce was sent to complete the arrest, and by 2 o'clock in the afternoon he and the doctor made their appearance at police headquarters. But here a delay occurred. For no sooner had Mr. Gryce stepped through the doorway than a man grasped him by the arm and an eager voice whispered in his ear:

"I've got her. She's here. I't been a hard chase, for she is frightened about something, and tried to keep out of the way. But I found her at last, and it only remains for you to make her talk."

Mr. Gryce's pale cheek took on a little color. Peering hastily about, his glance fell on the shrinking form of a young woman pressed up against the wall near by.

"That is all right," he declared. And turning to Dr. Molesworth, he informed him that he would have to give him up to other hands for a few minutes, as he had some important business to transact.

He was gone some time, and when he came back the girl was not with him. But the inspector was, and it was he who stepped up to the doctor and informed him that the suspicions against him had been proved unfounded, and that he was at liberty to depart.

CHAPTER XVIII.

IN THE HOSPITAL.

Dr. Cameron's office offered a great contrast to that of Dr. Molesworth. Instead of gloom there was cheer. Yet the man sitting there possessed as strong a soul, and held as firm a grip on his profession as his less self-indulgent and less prosperous rival. His prospects of success were brighter too, for he had that genius for plunging at a glance to the bottom of things, which Molesworth lacked; the latter being forced to earn every step of his way by the severest study and the most intense mental effort.

Dr. Cameron was meditating upon all this that same night, as he waited for his wife, whom he was expecting home from an entertainment. He was meditating upon it and thinking of her. She was so fair, so tender, so baffling. There was such love in her look, such haunting music in her voice. He had been surprised into love; and she who had performed this miracle was his own wife, the woman he was bound to love, cherish and sustain unto the end!

The entertainment from which he was expecting her was a reception, and it was time for her to be home. He had not gone after her for fear of passing her on the road. It was a quarter to 12, and she ought to have been in the house at 11.

Surprised, and alarmed even, he rang the bell and asked the sleepy servant who attended him whether Mrs. Cameron had come home.

"O yes, sir," was the unexpected reply. "She returned before you did."

Relieved, he put out the lights and hurried up stairs. She was not in her boudoir, nor was she in the bed room beyond.

He rang the bell again.

"But Mrs. Cameron is not here!" said he to the servant.

"Then she must be up stairs, sir, in the little room. She does often sit there when she is alone."

It was not the first time he had been told that same thing; but he could never understand her reason for secluding herself in such an unwelcome spot, when she had her own luxurious apartments at her command. Did she wish to get away from him? It could not be. What was this mystery then? He had an impulse to go up at once and see, but he did not. He was either too proud or too considerate.

"When the clock strikes 12, I will go for her. Till then let me read her books." And he took up a dainty volume of poems. He had reached some very tender lines when he suddenly experienced a thrill and looked up. Was it a spirit who stood before him? No; no spirit ever had a face filled with such human tenderness and resolve. It was Genevieve, but Genevieve in a mood he could not fathom. Clad in a soft woollen garment of the purest white, she stood in the door-way and looked at him till he was seized by a feeling of the uncanny, and rising, held out his arms as if he knew that would break the spell.

And it did. With a swift and gliding step she crossed the room and stood before him.

"Walter," she murmured, before he could speak, "I displeased you to-day, or rather I showed myself to be less of a woman than you expected. This has broken my heart; I cannot live, feeling that you have no confidence in my word and possibly not in my act. Walter, I have come to you at this solemn hour, fresh from my prayers, and as I hope from my repentance, to say that I have told my last lie, petty or large. Whatever comes—" She paused and a spasm passed over her face—"I will speak nothing but the truth hereafter, and this I swear, not by the Bible, but by the dearest thing to me in life, my husband's love."

"Genevieve!" he cried, drawing down her hands in his and pressing them to his heart.

"Do not speak just yet," she pleaded. "Let me feel you hold me in your heart in perfect confidence."

Wondering at an emotion so deep as to be almost appalling, he drew her to his breast and held her so without a word. Her eyes closed and a look of perfect peace settled for an instant over her features. Then she withdrew herself, and clasping her two hands tightly together, questioned him with her eyes as much as to say:

"What do you want of me? Ask what you will and I will tell the truth."

But he caught her passionately in his arms, saying:

"Now that I have my jewel without a flaw, let me enjoy the moment to its full; for now, for the first time in my life, I am a perfectly happy man."

This took place at midnight. The next morning Mr. Cameron asked her husband if he had any patients on the East Side. He answered that he had a few, but that he mainly rode over there to visit Dr. Molesworth's patient at the hospital.

"Who is doing well?" she inquired.

"Who is doing very well."

"Would you mind"—she spoke timidly—"if I sometimes went with you when you visit the poor?"

"You would?" A new light visited his face. It had been a dream of his to have a wife who would take an interest in his work.

"You shall go with me this very day," said he.

They drove to the hospital first. Entering the ward where Bridget Holleran lay, the woman whose case had been transferred to Dr. Cameron by Molesworth, they passed down through the two lines of cots, where Genevieve at a glance beheld more suffering than she had ever seen before in her life, and came out into that part of the room devoted to the use of this special patient. As they did so Dr. Cameron paused and so did Genevieve, for seated beside the poor woman was a man whose back turned towards them, roused in both a strange feeling of surprise and bewilderment.

"Is it——" she whispered. There was no longer reason for hesitation or doubt. The face and form were those of Dr. Molesworth.

Dr. Cameron stepped briskly forward.

"This is an unexpected pleasure," said he: "How long——" But here he discreetly paused, and gave his sentence another turn, "have you been able to be out."

"Since yesterday," was the brief reply. Here he bowed to Mrs. Cameron. "You take interest in our patient," he remarked.

"This is my first visit," she replied, "I hope you are satisfied with her condition."

Julius Molesworth let his grave gaze rest on the fair face of his interlocutor for a moment. Then he shook his head, and answered:

"The case is mysterious, but I hope all will go well. My greatest anxiety is that no mistake is made behind my back. I do not allude to you, doctor, you know that, but to the women."

He looked at his coadjutor as he spoke, and that gentleman at once bowed.

"She is doing well," he remarked. "I do not see how you can expect anything more."

Dr. Molesworth smiled, and waved his hands towards the patient.

"Have your little talk with her," he suggested; "the good woman misses it. She says you do so set her up with your bright looks." He held out his hand to Mrs. Cameron, and observed, "There are limitations to all our self-sacrifices; though Dr. Cameron has done so well in my absence, I cannot say that I am sorry to be at liberty again to take care of my own patients."

"No—yes—" she murmured, looking down at his hand with a sudden and violent change of color. "I—I—" She turned away and laid her hand on her husband's arm. "Do you wish to stay any longer?" she asked.

There was a confusion in her tone while her manner to the doctor had certainly savored of rudeness, but Dr. Molesworth seemed neither to notice the one nor the other.

"I am in no hurry," said he, "to lose the doctor's company, especially as I have another case here which I am sure it will interest him to see." And he looked at Dr. Cameron, who at once cried:

"I am on hand for anything of that kind."

"Come, then," cried the other; "but first excuse me while I take off my cuffs; I can do nothing at a bed-side with them on."

And while the two waited, this strange man pulled off his cuffs and put them in the pocket of his overcoat, after which operation his brow looked lighter and he passed with them up the hall, chatting quite genially.

Genevieve felt sick at heart. On their return, she again expressed a wish to leave. But just as they turned to go, a startled cry made them both look back.

It was from Dr. Molesworth, and the word he had uttered was,

"Lost."

"What is lost?"

It was Dr. Cameron who spoke; his wife seemed incapable of uttering a word.

Dr. Molesworth laughed. "Excuse me," said he, "I did not mean to be so tragic; but in our short absence my cuffs have been taken out of my overcoat pocket, and though the loss is not great it is certainly annoying."

"I know who did it," cried a voice near them. "It was that slim small man who came in after——"

But Dr. Cameron did not keep his wife waiting any longer to hear these simple explanations; the affair seemed altogether too puerile.

Would he have thought any more seriously of it had he known that written on the inside of one of those cuffs—the one which had been on the hand which Dr. Molesworth had extended to Genevieve—were written in large characters these words;

"Beware! I was not released so suddenly without a motive."

IMMENSE DEFALCATION.

A Partner Ruins His Firm by His Stealings—Six Years of Peculation.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The brokerage firm of Mills, Robeson & Smith, at 66 Broadway, failed in business Saturday on account of a defalcation of $350,000 by Albert A. Smith, the junior member of the firm. His peculations had continued for a period of six years and were discovered by sheer accident on Saturday by William A. Watson, the cashier of the firm. When Smith was charged with the crime by his partners, he at once acknowledged his guilt and turned over to the firm $30,000 in cash and some real estate, which, he said, was everything he possessed in the world. Smith was well known on the street. He is 45 years old and a widower. He belonged to all the fashionable clubs in Brooklyn and was a member of the late Henry Ward Beecher's church.

Owing to a bad speculation on his own account, Smith became embarrassed some six years ago. He needed money to make good his losses, and believing that he could return it again, he started on his crooked career.

Smith's mode of operation was to buy either seven, eight or nine shares of preferred stock. He would then raise the figures seven, eight or nine to 70, 80 or 90 on the certificates, by simply placing a naught after the figure and adding the letter "y" to the word eight and "ty" to seven and nine. Smith ran a private account in his own firm, and in that way was enabled to draw 90 per cent of the apparent value of the stock. The firm could borrow money by placing the certificates with the loan companies with which it was connected. How it was that the forgery and defalcation was not discovered long ago is a surprise to all concerned at present. It was by a sheer accident that it was at last discovered on Saturday. Wm. A. Watson, cashier and stock clerk connected with the firm, was at work about the office at 11 o'clock on Saturday morning. In connection with his other duties he also examined stock certificates. While engaged in the ordinary performance of his duty he picked up one of Smith's fraudulent certificates and was going to lay it aside again, when his attention was suddenly attracted to a little irregularity. He spoke to an attache about it and then went away and made some inquiries.

Watson next came flying into the office greatly excited and hurried into the private room in which Mr. Mills and Mr. Robeson were seated. He told them that he had discovered some irregularities. He said that Mr. Smith, the junior partner, had bought eight shares and that the certificate was raised to 80 shares. Mr. Smith was in the office at the time. He was called into the private room and shown the raised certificate and charged with the crime. To the surprise of his partners Smith said he had done that kind of work for about six years.

During his confession Smith broke down and wept. He said he was willing to go to prison for his crime and he would surrender himself to the authorities. After Smith left the office he hurried to police headquarters and laid the whole matter before Inspector Byrnes.

Smith was subsequently taken into custody and brought over to this city and locked up in a cell at the central office. William A. Watson has been appointed assignee of the firm.

Desolation in Panama.

Washington City Post.]

Victor Vifquain, late United States Consul at Panama, was at the Riggs House last night. He was appointed under the Cleveland regime, and was only lately superseded by a Republican, having his office life prolonged about two years. Mr. Vifquain's home is in Nebraska, near Lincoln. He is Belgian by birth and a man of fine intelligence. He said: "The Isthmus could not well be in a more stagnant condition. Ever since the abandonment of the Lesseps canal population and trade have both declined. Colon, which little more than a year ago had 15,000 people, has now scarcely 8,000. The recent fire pretty nearly destroyed all that was left. Will it be rebuilt? That depends on whether Mr. Napoleon Wyse will be able to get the Bogota government to renew the concessions it gives Count de Lesseps. The grant expires January 1, 1892, and if not extended the canal will be abandoned for all time. There is a chance yet that operations may be resumed, if not by the French, by others who see the advantages of the Isthman route. I am glad to get home once more, and henceforth am willing to stay in the United States. Society at Panama is wretched, and there is nothing there to alleviate the monotony of existence."

THE CRY OF MILLIONS

OH, MY BACK!

STOP IT NOW.

SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the 15th of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me in such a manner that I was bent over. When I sat down it was almost impossible for me to get up alone, or to put on my clothes, when kind Providence sent Dr. Heuley, with the DRAGON KIDNEY TEA, to my hotel. I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days, I am happy to state, that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.

AT AN IRISH WAKE.

Unique Features of a Funeral Observance on the Old Sod.

How Celtic Mourners "Wake" the Dead—Chatting and Story-Telling Around the Corpse—The Ubiquitous Pipe and Black Bottle.

The custom of "waking" the dead in Ireland, says the London Spectator, though by no means existing in its ancient glory and vigor, still obtains in a modified and shorn form in many country districts. Briefly described, it amounts to this—that the neighbors of the deceased assemble and spend the night in the room with the corpse, chatting and telling stories; in the meanwhile, of course, taking "a blast av the pipe," and a drop of "the crayture" to sustain them during their vigil. The conversation on such occasions naturally turns, to a large extent, to the virtues of the departed, which are duly embellished with all the natural eloquence of the speakers. No one unfamiliar with Ireland can at all realize what a scene a "wake" presents; and we propose to give a sort of specimen of the conversation which prevails on such an occasion.

"An ould follyer" is generally in a seat of honor, close by the head of the bed; she has been a nurse, perhaps, in the family, and as she rocks her aged body backward and forward she pours forth with a mellifluous Southern brogue, in a sad, wailing tone, a long piece of delightfully discursive domestic history. "Ah, wisha, wisha, lave me alone, the masther was a grand man; Thade Regan was the grand man; he milked up to forty cows." (This implies that he was a dairy-farmer whose stock amounted to that number.) "Shure it's meself remimbers the day av his weddin'; Lard Edward was at home at the time by the same token, an' as he wint by our cabin I heerd me mother to say: 'By gar, there's th' lard up!' An' shure enough he was, for he was on his way to Tim Heolahan's, who was minding thirty hogs for him. 'Turn thim out, Tim,' says the lard, 'turn thim out,' says he, 'for I want to choose out two av thim,' says he. 'To be shure, and why not, your honor's glory, me lard?' says Tim; and, whin he had thim out, the lard makes chice av wan widout a tail, an' av another widout an ear! An' thin he says to Tim, says he: 'Have thim two bastes kilt,' says he, 'an' give them to the people that's comin' to Thade Regan's weddin',' says he, 'for their dinner,' says he. Ah, wisha, deeling, but the lard was mighty fond av poor Thade; may God be wid thim both! An' don't I well remimber the time that poor Thade, rest his sowl, bought a farm near the red bog an' how I attinded at the dinner that same day."

At this juncture, another speaker, thinking he should have an innings, offers the nurse a drink; and while she is occupied with it he observes: "Wisha, wenoch, it was the poor masther that was fand av his marning drop; many's he time he'd take me wid him into Judy Dolan's little public, an' he'd say: Judy,' he'd say, 'give Nicholas something to warm nim, and take the could ut av his stumick this frasthy morning.' An' by and by he'd say: 'Nicholas, man, don't ye have a glass?' an' I'd tell him I had wan; but he'd say: 'Don't tell me; ou had not;' an' av coorse I'd say: 'It n't for the likes av me to contradict a ntleman like your honor,' an' Judy ould fill it up again."

A driver of a hearse who was present ould add reflections which seemed to m suitable to the occasion: "I tell ye's t that I have been a driving a hearse an an' boy these twinty years an' more, have druv' rich an' poor; an' whin the ind was an me back, the smell av them th was just alike; an' I didn't like it ther. And whin I comes across a man o has two or three hundred pounds, ' sees all his capers an' antics, I says meself: 'What a gladiathur ye are; but it, me boy, until I have ye in the arse, an' then ye'll be quiet an' aisy ough.' Shure I wanst druv a jedge to graveyard; an' I saw the yalla clay oveled down on him as well as another an' he rotting wid money. God save " This observation called forth a neral exclamation: "Well, Ned, ye're error." The old nurse—"a charred l wrinkled piece of womanhood"—ng now refreshed, would take up her able again, and offer her snuff-box, or her her snuff, to every one present. was done in this way: holding the box her right hand, she poured out some ts contents on the palm of her left. ether you used the snuff or not, it considered unlucky and unevil to use to take a pinch of it.

mong the lower classes "wakes" are l very prevalent; beggars have their "wakes," and even little children "waked." A wake is quite an exsive ceremony to a poor, struggling king-man or tradesman; but he feels t he would loss caste without holdit, and he has not the moral courage reak through the custom. The exses of a wake in the "strong" farmclass are a very serious item, indeed. Roman Catholic clergy nowadays erally or universally discourage this tom; but it is so deeply rooted that eradication must be a question of e.

ASSISTED THE AUTHOR.

How a Printer Inserted a Good Idea of His Own and Lost His Job.

A printer told the following excellent story to a Chicago Times man:

"I had a good job," he said, "in a Monroe street fiction foundry—one of those print shops where they publish stories of the 'Skeleton Hunter's Last Gurgling Gasp' order by the cord. It is the rankest kind of rot, and is liable to give a printer blood poisoning if he handles much of it. It is the sort of literature that induces little boys to get up in the night, steal the old man's pocket-book, buy guns and start out West to rescue the imperial maiden from the lair of the robber chieftain and restore her to her agonized parents.

"There were twenty printers and six liars, each a full-fledged Ananias, working in the place. The liars sat at a table in one end of the room grinding out those unwholesome stories as fast as we could put them in type. One day I got a wad of copy that was positively sickening. It was about a lovely girl who had been captured and torn from her home by a heartless white desperado and his band of bloodthirsty Apaches. The girl was in a desperate fix. She either had to marry the villain or become his wife, he didn't care which, and he was then on his way to a cave in the mountains, where he was going to have the ceremony performed.

"That night they camped in a rocky gorge two hundred miles from nowhere and bound the unfortunate maiden to a tree with the usual buckskin thongs, which cut deep into her tender wrists. Then they all laid down and went to sleep. In the meantime old Zeke, the Hairy Scout, who was on the trail, sneaked up just at daylight, when people sleep the soundest. Zeke sailed in and killed twenty-five or thirty Indians with the butt end of his trusty rifle. He didn't want to shoot for fear he would waken the others. Then, after he had cut a notch for each corpse in his gunstock and hung the coarse, black scalplocks to his belt, he released the girl, hoisted her under his arm, jumped into the saddle and rode away.

"He rode at full speed for forty-eight miles without stopping. When night closed in the bold scout pulled rein and went into camp. First he picketed his horse, then built a fire, fixed a cot of leaves for the girl, and got her something to eat out of his saddle-bags. This was where I got in my work.

"This first thing Zeke took out of the bags was several thick slices of fresh Vienna bread with honey on them. Next came cold boiled ham, cut thin, an apple pie with a short, crispy upper crust, and last a tender spring chicken, roasted a delicate brown. Mind you, he had all this stuff in a pair of saddle-bags in the wilds of the Rocky mountains, three hundred miles from civilization, in the year of 1836. It made me sick, but I resolved that the poor girl should have one good feed if I died for it. So I shoved in another paragraph like this, completing the bill of fare:

"'After getting the girl started Zeke reached into the saddle-bag and pulled out a bowl of steaming hot consomme and a broiled fresh mackerel, some deviled crabs, cold slaw, potato salad, a half fry, veal cutlets breaded, with tomato sauce, green corn on the cob, some clam chowder, stewed turkey, a portion of rice pudding, two cups of chocolate, pork tenderloin, Rochefort cheese and a bottle of Bass' ale, Saratoga chips, a plate of vanilla ice cream, a Chinese paper napkin, sliced cucumbers, some California grapes and a nickel-plated nut-cracker.'"

"Did it go?" asked an interested listener.

"No, it didn't," said the printer, sadly, "but I did. The boss came to me next morning with a proof slip and wanted to know who was writing that story. I said the author was making a stagger in that direction, but he wasn't giving the girl a fair show.

"'That may be,' said the boss, 'but if he wants to run a cafe in connection with the story we'll hire a cook and make it easier for you.'

"Then he told me that I was too smart to be a printer, and had better go out where the cool air would strike me. I went."

The Flowers of Europe.

Of the 4,300 kinds of flowers which grow in Europe, only 430 are odoriferous. The white flower is the most common, there being 1,194 kinds of that color. Less than one-fifth of these are fragrant. Of the 951 kinds of yellow flowers 77 are odoriferous; of the 823 red kinds, 31; of the 308 violet-blue kinds, 13. Of the 140 kinds with combined colors, 28 are fragrant.

Length of a Degree.

The length of a degree of longitude at the equator is 69 1-16 statute miles. At the 30th degree of latitude it is 63¾ miles. At the 50th degree of latitude it is 44½ miles. At the 75th degree it is hardly 18 miles. At the 83d degree of latitude it lacks .47 of a mile of being 10 miles. At the 89th degree it is but 1 1-3 miles, and gradually draws to a point as the line nears the pole.

How the Duchess Managed It.

The orthography of our great-grandmothers was uncertain. The old Duchess of Gordon used to say to her cronies: "You know, my dear, when I don't know how to spell a word I always draw a line under it; and if it is spelled wrong it passes for a very good joke, and if it is spelled right it don't matter."

Strange Absent-Mindedness.

"Talk about absent-mindedness," said a citizen to-day, "why, when I was a boy I worked for a man who was so absent-minded that he discharged me three times in one week and paid me a week's wages each time."

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

All hail, Columbia! dark and steep
Thy rugged mountains stretch afar
Where Fraser rolls his waters deep
And Commerce drives his golden car;
Nor longer shall the leaden sleep
Of cold neglect thy progress mar,
For o'er thee with triumphant sweep
The Labor Army spreads afar.

By river, valley, lake and wood
Shall surge the tide of busy life,
The settlers scattered cabins rude
Already tell of coming strife
'Twixt man and nature's solitude,
Till every patch with plenty rife
From tangled forest roughly hewed
Shall be the shrine of child and wife.

Mong sylvan shades and rural charms
I mark Old Scotland's hardy race,
Renowned of yore in deeds of arms
Victorious o'er the wilderness;
Their cottage homes and cozy farms
Within the forest's rude embrace,
Secure from faming, dire alarms
And Tyranny's aggressiveness.

I toil and dream of better days
And sweeter sounds my fancy hears,
As through the future's misty haze
A vast and varied throng appears,
Whose songs of peace and happiness
Are wafted o'er the coming years,
And tell of millions yet to bless
Columbia's hardy pioneers.

WANTED ASSISTANCE.

How a Knight of the Road Attacked a Meeting of Deacons.

The trustees had just begun the business of their monthly meeting, and Deacon Smith had the floor, says the New York Evening Sun. They were legislating for one of South Norwalk's most prosperous churches. Two of the members had late business engagements in the city, and Deacon Smith's shop on the main street, near the station, had been chosen for the meeting this month for the sake of convenience. The deacon was well under way when the outer door was seen to open slightly, and he paused to note the cause of the interruption.

Connecticut is famed for the extensive variety of its tramps, and one of the most interesting type now appeared. His entrance into the room was made in a thoroughly original manner. When the door was sufficiently ajar to admit of his head it popped in on the astonished deacons, surmounted by a most dilapidated hat and complemented by a smiling face and a full, ragged beard. When he became assured that no tangible obstacle was on its way to meet him he opened the door wide, and, with another glance of satisfaction on the benevolent faces that surrounded him, he softly closed the door behind him and stepped jauntily forward, with his hat in his hand. His hair hung down over his face in a rakish way, but with a graceful sweep of his long arm he caught up a wad of it in his hand and laid it back from his forehead. He had on a long frock coat fastened closely around his waist by a thorn, and from the flowing flap above oozed out the ends of a much-soiled handkerchief. His closely-fitting trousers, through numerous portals of which protruded his interesting self, seemed to run without any dividing line into the shoe and boot which respectively incased his feet.

The deacons had time to note these peculiarities before the stranger broke the silence. His voice seemed to emanate from that particular boot and emerged with a most pronounced French accent, which will here be omitted.

"Gentlemen," he began, "your pardon for disturbing you, but I am very sick."

He paused after this announcement to note the effect.

"I went to the doctor," he soon continued, "and he gave me the pills—see, the pills," and he held up to view a small bottle which he had in the palm of his hand.

"He said take the pills, three after each meal, and I would like very much to have some assistance."

"Well, why in thunder don't you take your pills, then, and not come bothering here!" interposed a deacon who was becoming tired.

"Gentlemen," replied the tramp, with much unction, "I can not take the pills; I have no meal."

He got that meal.

NOVEMBER 10th.

The Rev. I. Burnham-Pegg having just completed the purchase of a lease for some years of the premises, has removed there, and will be pleased to meet intending students or friends at their homes, or his present residence at any moment.

Mr. B.-Pegg begs students to examine personally the following Diplomas, and Certificates secured by him.

Diploma of Fellowship of the Society of Science, Literature, and Art of London (England), 1890.

Diplomas—Honors in Greek, and First Class Latin, 1877.

Certificate for proficiency in French, from L. Stievenard, M. A., 1877.

Diploma for Technological science, city and guilds of London Institute, Gresham College, by Sir Philip Magnus, 1881.

Certificate of the Highest class for practical work under Prof. Judd, in Mineralogy, Geology, etc., in School of Mines, London, 1881.

Certificate of the Highest Class for practical work under Professor Guthrie, in Electricity, in School of Mines, 1879.

Certificate in practical work in Inorganic Chemistry under Professor Hodgkinson, in the School of Mines, 1882.

Three advanced Certificates from Science and Arts' Department, S. Kensington, in Theoretical Sciences.

Freemason's, Master's Certificate, 1870.

Mr. Pegg studied Hebrew under Dr. Blancke in 1867, and has taught Hebrew, Spanish and German for years

Commercial Correspondence, Accounts, Book-keeping and Pitman's Shorthand,

Have been Leading Subjects in his Teaching.

Students are requested to ask for proofs of the following facts: That after acting as Head Master for a year in Smythe street Academy, Wakefield, he resigned receiving a flattering testimonial and presentation. For eight years after he was Head Master in St. Charles' Grammar School, London, and on his resignation in 1883, he received the highest possible testimonial from his managers. Two years later, on resigning his appointment as Science Lecturer, and First Classical Master in St. Guthbert's Grammar School, Newcastle, the Lord Bishop of Newcastle, Canon Ramsay, and the managers gave him their highest commendation. After this he became Principal of the New Cross High School, and of Bath House College, Twickenham. From successful students preparing for Cambridge, London, Durham, Trinity, Edinburgh Universities; the Law, Medical, Local, Army, Engineering College, and Science examinations, about 50 letters are open to inspection.

Students can take Single Class Subjects, or the Course, and payments will be monthly.

A large number of Rooms are Furnished FOR BOARDERS.

As a teacher Mrs. Pegg holds the certificate of the Lords of the Council on education, England; First Class Kindergarten, Singing, and Science Certificates; and for about 20 years (10 as Head Mistress) was employed in the largest schools in England.

Evening Classes in all Subjects will be commenced at 7 p. m., on Monday, Nov. 10th.

Students can enter for Single classes, or for the course.

PLODDING MEDIOCRITY.

Not long ago the San Francisco Call presented a summary of the views of the leading merchants of Chicago as to what qualifications are especially desireable in a youth just starting out on a business career. The declaration of these merchant princes excited so much attention that the Chicago Herald caused a number of young men to be interviewed as to what they attributed their success, and whether they ever felt the loss of a college education. One young man, prominent in insurance circles, who, on reaching the lake city, started out in search of work with just 25 cents in his pocket, attributed his success to unadulterated hustling, strict attention to business, and, above all things, loyalty to his employers. He had often felt the loss of a college education, yet he had reached the conclusion it was not essential to success in business. A partner in a wholesale establishment attributed his success to good, honest, hard work. Enough of that would carry any young man to success in business, provided, of course, he had a certain amount of ability. He had many a time missed the benefit of a college education, but was now a willing student in the school of life. One of the most brilliant examples of business possibilities was a young partner in a world-famed firm, who entered its employ twelve years ago a penniless boy. He attributed his success to his inability to divorce his own interests from those of the house with which he was connected. He, too, missed the benefits of a college education. Another young man of 29, receiving a salary of $3,500, declared that close attention to business and working faithfully for the best interests of an employer, rather than brilliancy of natural gift, lead to success. Generally speaking, it was not the brilliant men who succeeded in business. A young man had to show his willingness to do anything in the shape of honest work. This and not chance would lead him to success.

It will be seen from the character of the foregoing replies that the want of a college education is no bar to success, natural abilities industriously and conscientiously applied being equal to most business emergencies. Nevertheless education is a good thing to have. The more intelligent men are, the wider their grasp of the features of their environment. It may be supposed, however, that many successful men who have missed a college education over-rate its value It might have been that had they been college educated their success would not have been so marked. Education, while broadening the horizon of the mind, tends to unsettle faith, that is to say, we are made to see too many probabilities of a failure. No man ever proved a success who was constantly haunted with "ifs" and "ands." Success is often achieved in defiance of logic. The successful man, in fact, is he who sees only his side of the case, whose judgment is never warped by a lot of phantom possibilities. General GRANT attributed his success not to his faculty of guessing the enemy's plans, but in keeping the enemy guessing at his, and to the further fact, that in military operations one side was as cowardly as the other. There is such a thing as being able to see too many sides to a question, and to the extent that education sharpens this faculty, to that extent does it lessen the chances of success, because it leaves a man undecided and consequently unable to act promptly. But the moral of the story of Chicago's successful business men is, that plodding mediocrity will win. He who applies himself industriously and honestly to the achievement of a single object, and who has the patience to wait, cannot but succeed, always assuming, of course, that the percentage of chances are not too strong against him, and that he is engaged in an enterprise which fills a long-felt want.

LED INTO TEMPTATION.

The TIMES is accused of "tempting" the Independents from their line of duty. This accusation, besides being puerile is a whine, and the Independents, doubtless, will so interpret it. The TIMES does not "tempt," it argues. Inspired by some dubious utterances in the News, it attempted to show that the causes which gave rise to the Independents forbid that they should consent to be reflected through the very men in whom those causes had their origin. The TIMES holds, and it believes with reason, that the present Government is incompetent. If a consecutive succession of blunders is any gauge of the calibre of men, we have in the present Government a quintette of smooth bores of an obsolete pattern, the recoil of whose discharge is more dangerous than the discharge itself. Less than twelve months ago these obsolete, old smooth bores discharged a mineral act. The recoil was at once apparent, and an order-in-council was interposed as a buffer. Now, we have every reason to believe that this order-in-council is not worth the paper it is written upon. Acts of Parliament cannot be annulled by an order-in-council. If they can be, what is the use of a parliament? But it is urged in justification that the $105 is a tax, and that, therefore, the order-in-council is legal. The sale of a piece of land for a compensation cannot be interpreted, in the ordinary acceptance of the term, as a tax, and in the event of a case coming up under the operation of the act, there is no question as to the attitude of the courts. The government is profoundly aware that their position is unsound, otherwise they would not have convened a mining commission, and we venture to predict that one of their first acts will be the repeal of the mineral act. Again, in the matter of the indiscriminate sale of public lands, the order-in-council is not worth the paper it is written upon. If the operation of the public lands act, the result of the sober legislation of the House, may be suspended by an order in-council, this Province has a veritable star-chamber and the representatives of the people are but so many figure heads. The government by the exercise of sheer force may prevent the indiscriminate sale of public lands, but if anybody wants land and the interests at stake justify legal proceedings to get it, the order-in-council would be pronounced invalid. Is the Government aware that the order-in-council is worthless, or did they make it for political effect merely?

We are not to suppose that the Government are such fools as to hold that the order-in-council is legal. They are simply trading off the ignorance of the multitude, posing as reformers under the mask of what virtually amounts to fraud. The order-in-council prohibiting the indiscriminate sale of the public lands is tyranny in the guise of benevolence, illegality justified by necessity, and last of all, the refuge of political charlatans. Other instances in which the Government have resorted to the Star Chamber to cover their ignorance, and to give them the appearance of political sanctity, might be enumerated, but these two instances will suffice for the present. The question arises, hence, have the Independents anything to gain by a coalescence with the Government? Can they afford to do it? This is the position of affairs, and what are the Independents going to do about it? If the Independents, under these circumstances, join issue with the Government, they give the lie to the causes on which they base their principles. If this is "tempting" the Independents, so be it.

THE BARINGS.

The trouble with the BARINGS was that they were carrying virtually the Argentine Republic's loan and taking back holdings of dissatisfied customers to whom they had sold a part thereof. Three months ago, according to the New York Evening Post, when the Argentine revolution first began to cripple the resources of the house, which was floating Argentine securities, an examination of the affairs of the BARINGS showed a clear balance of £15,000,000 over and above all liabilities. The shrinkage of £11,000,000, or say $55,000,000, in three months shows what a tremendous strain the London financiers have been subjected to. As the history of the affair is not uninteresting, we clip the following from the New York Evening Sun:

The facts regarding the extraordinary monetary situation which has prevailed in London the past ten days may be summed up as follows: Owing to the extent of their operations in railroads and lands in South America, the Barings have been more or less embarrassed for over six months. Last Thursday week the Barings, at the conclusion of business, decided that it was impossible for them to continue Friday, and so they notified the Directors of the Bank of England, who immediately convened and startled the whole financial world by raising the rate of interest, a proceeding most unprecedented, and which called a halt in speculation at every money center in the world. The present week has been one of the most painful suspense in banking circles, and this feeling was reflected in a minor degree in New York, where only a few of the more important houses having European connections have been aware of the real nature of the difficulty in London.

The article goes on to say that £11,000,000 have been furnished the BARINGS, of which the Bank of England furnished £7,000,000, and the other relief party the remainder. The BARINGS have been allowed three years to adjust their affairs. The noticeable feature of the assistance rendered the BARINGS is, that the London financiers have not lost faith in the ultimate resuscitation of Argentine securities. According to these astute gentlemen Argentine is a good investment.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The O'SHEA divorce suit is now before the courts, and from the showing made by the petitioner he seems to have a clear case. Mrs. O'SHEA declines to offer any defence, and so does PARNELL, the consequence of which will be that the latter will be thrown into the costs. The fact of PARNELL refusing to defend himself is no proof of his guilt. Under any circumstances, as in the case of HENRY WARD BEECHER, he would be unable to establish his innocence beyond cavil, and since a taint must rest on him anyhow, he probably thinks that the easiest and best way out of the difficulty is to ignore it and pay the costs.

STANLEY says that EMIN Pasha says that he saw many apes using torches for their night excursions. Prof. ROMANES, who has made the study of animal life his own, bluntly refuses to accept the trustworthiness of EMIN's observation and prefers (as he states in a contribution to Nature of July 10) to account for the phenomena in question on the supposition that the Pasha, by reason of his short-sightedness, "had mistaken a band of native children for his large tribe of chimpanzees." But it can scarcely be conceived that EMIN was alone when he made his remarkable observations. Moreover, a still more recent statement in Nature avers that "a large ape is now undoubtedly acting as a signalman on a railway at Natal."

Mr. STANLEY thinks he has undergone sufficient hardships in his journey through Central Africa, and does not mean to rough it in future travel. In his engagement with the agent who has arranged his forthcoming lecture tour in the States, he stipulated that he shall have a private car, in which he may not only travel, but feed and sleep throughout his tour. Colonel POND not only agreed to this request, but writes that he has had a car specially constructed for the use of the lecturer and his bride. STANLEY'S remuneration for his lectures is on the same princely style. For his first lecture he will receive £1,000, and £100 for each repetition. This compares favorably with his last lecturing tour, which took place a short time before he started to rescue Emin. He then contracted to deliver a series of lectures at a fee of £25 each.

There is a wheat blockade in Palouse County, Washington. The railway companies profess to be unable to furnish cars, and the elevator companies refuse to buy any more wheat stored with them. Wheat that was selling early in the season for 55 cents is now worth only 45, sacked, and no one is buying. Buyers and sellers are alike tied up and utterly handicapped for want of transportation facilities. Northern Pacific officials say there is enough wheat along their line to keep all their available cars employed until January 1892. It is remarked, however, that the elevator companies and the railroads have taken advantage of the situation and combined for the purpose of mutual profit and it seems absolutely safe to predict that when prices are sufficiently depressed there will be a more lively transportation movement. Speculators, it would appear, are breaking ground for a Farmers' Alliance in Washington.

The St. James Gazette intimates that France is willing to surrender her Newfoundland fishery rights for one of the British West African colonies, possibly Gambia. This settlement, which is on the river Gambia, consists of the Island of St. Mary, British Combo, Albreda, the Ceded Mile and McCarthy's Island. It contains an area of 69 square miles and a population of about 15,000. The Gambia River falls into the Atlantic by a large estuary, measuring in some parts nearly twenty-seven miles across, but contracting to little more than two miles between Barrapoint and Bathurst-town. It flows through a country of great fertility, and is navigable for boats 300 miles to the falls of Barraconda, and above the falls for at least 160 miles further. In 1870 there was another proposal to transfer the colony to the French, but it led to nothing more than a voluminous diplomatic correspondence.

The Sultan, it is said, is laying by a pretty penny for a rainy day. Anticipating at a no distant date the collapse of his empire, he is steadily increasing his private holdings. Half the cultivated land in the vicinity of Bagdad is said to be the Sultan's private property, and in addition he has acquired title to the valley of the Jordan between Lake Tiberius and the Dead Sea. But this is not all. He has acquired mining property, holds, in fact, every mine in actual operation in the Turkish Empire, and besides holds a concession for steam navigation on the Euphrates and on the Tigress. The Qua at Smyrna he has also gobbled up, and he is the owner of a number of mills in various localities; and all of this property is free from taxation. The supposition was that the Sultan's real estate deals originated in a desire to outwit foreign bond-holders, but it seems otherwise. A Turk of the official class, well informed and educated, proposes the following explanation:

We none of us believe that our state can hold together much longer than ten years, perhaps twenty, possibly thirty years, surely no more. Padishah holds the same view, and is preparing for the end. He cannot directly take money out of the state treasury, and he pursues this method. Landed properties and concessions acquired from the state, which cost him little or nothing in the way of preliminary outlay, yield him at present a fair revenue, and in a few years can be sold for a great price. You will see that presently when the lands and concessions become marketable one by one he will dispose of them, and invest the proceeds in foreign securities to prepare for the day of his departure from Turkey.

If Georgism should go into effect in the course of a decade or two, the Sultan's investments will have been in vain.

MR. HIGGINS EXPLAINS.

Hon. D. W. Higgins Interviewed on the Contents of Mr. Connolly's Letter.

Hon. D. W. Higgins, formerly editor and owner of the Colonist, was seen this morning by a TIMES reporter in reference to the allusion in Mr. M. Connolly's letter to the editor of that paper. In answer to a question as to whether any such promise was ever made, or whether any money was ever given, Mr. Higgins said:

"The matter is one which had almost entirely passed out of my memory, but the appearance of the letters has called it up again. Early in 1885, I think it was, when the matter of extending the dock was under discussion, Mr. Connolly came to me. I then being editor of the Colonist, and asked me if the paper would agitate for dock extension. Believing that the enlargement or lengthening of the dock would be of benefit to the country, I at once told Mr. Connolly that I would do all in my power toward furthering the work. Several of the residents and citizens of Esquimalt and Victoria also spoke about the need of lengthening the dock, and to my mind the work was and is one of public need, to make the dock fit for all classes of ships. I did all I could to further the enterprise. Statistics were gathered at considerable trouble and some expense. Correspondence took place between my office and people who were cognizant of statistics in London, New York, San Francisco and China, with the object of gathering facts to show that the dock at Esquimalt would not admit the class of vessels intended for the Oriental trade if completed on its original (and present) lines. Several articles based on those statistics were published. No mention was had with Mr. Connolly as to compensation; but I certainly expected that if the dock was extended I would be reimbursed for legitimate expenses incurred in agitating the matter. The dock was not extended, and I do not consider that Mr. M. Connolly owed me anything for the actual money outlay had been small. Some weeks after the failure of the scheme Mr. Connolly came into my office and remarked that I must have been to considerable expense over the matter. I told him that was nothing, that it was part of a newspaper's business, and as the affair had failed there was nothing more to be said about it. Mr. Connolly remarked that I was one of the few men in the Province who had not tried to bleed him, and insisted upon my acceptance of some remuneration for the work which I had done in the matter. That was all that ever passed between us in connection with the subject, and I consider that the payment I received was only payment for time and money spent in gathering facts to more clearly state the reasons why the dock should have been lengthened. At the same time, as Mr. Connolly did not get the work to do, I was surprised that he deemed me his creditor."

Mr. Higgins was asked if he had ever heard Mr. Connolly state that it had been necessary to bribe any one, and Mr. Higgins replied that he had never heard any hint of the matter.

"Then what do you think he meant when he said that you were the decentest man here, and the only one who had not tried to bleed him?"

"I have not the slightest idea," replied Mr. Higgins.

MISSING FROM THE RANKS.

Death of Mr. James Stewart, a Prominent Journalist and Politician of Canada.

Death has called and taken from the ranks of Montreal society a face and figure of much prominence, in the person of Mr. James Stewart. Particularly will he be missed by newspaper men, but not alone in Montreal, for there is not a pressman in the Dominion who has visited Canada's commercial metropolis but knew "Jim" Stewart as a newspaper man, a friend and a gentleman in his dealings. Mr. Stewart has been since 1857 almost continuously one of the foremost figures of Liberal politics in Eastern Canada. He it was who, with one or two other enterprising spirits, built up that plucky Liberal banner, the Montreal Herald and engineered it into a power in politics. A keen politician, a close observer and compiler of facts he had the invaluable gift of wielding a facile pen with a style that was graceful and forceful, in language that was convincing and dignified. He was a model politician; full of ready and effective resources, manly and honorable to a degree towards an opponent; and though the political fight became ever so fierce, Mr. Stewart never strained his friendly or personal relations with his neighbor. He always came out of the contest with an unsullied honor as a politician, a citizen and a man. On this account he won as many friends in the opposing ranks as he counted on his own side. Political rewards had no attraction for him; like the warriors of old, his wish was to die in harness, with his face to the enemy; and to do so he refused more than one coveted emolument, not the least important of which was the customs collectorship of Montreal. His courage was never failing, his energy and spirit unquenchable.

In the profession he was a universal favorite, winning the respect and esteem of not a few. Indeed, the news of his death will call up in the breast of many a reporter in various quarters of the world remembrances of more than one kindness received in the gentlest manner at the hands of Mr. James Stewart.

SPORTING NOTES.

Brief Resume of Sporting Matters Here and There.

The backers of Jem Smith, the English champion, propose to match him against Joe McAuliffe, the American champion, for £500 a side. If McAuliffe is acquitted in the impending trial it is probable a big match will be arranged. Jimmey Carney has been challenged by Bill Reader, who offers to fight Carney at 9 stone 2 pounds and wager £500 to £300 on the result. Slavin and McAuliff are meeting with big success. Both attract large crowds at every exhibition, and there is a great curiosity to see the big American champion.

THE 200-YARD RECORD.

Wendell Baker, the crack sprinter of the Berkerley Athletic club, broke the record for 200 yards yesterday at the Berkerley Oval. The first trial was made in record time, 20-5 seconds. The second attempt was made after half an hour's rest and the distance was covered in 20 seconds, or 1-5 of a second better than the best previous American record, made several years ago by Lon E. Myers.

FOOTBALL CHALLENGE.

TO THE EDITOR:—Would you oblige the members of the Nanaimo association baseball team by putting this challenge in your valuable paper, as we don't know the name of the secretary of the Victoria team: We do hereby challenge them to play a game, Association rules, in Nanaimo. Hoping to have a reply soon, respectfully, ROBT. GOURLAY, Association Sec., Nanaimo.

GENERAL GOSSIP.

In Barney Hubbard, Tom O'Rourke thinks he has a world beater at 122 pounds. Jimmy Lynch is looked upon as the champion at that weight, and a match may be arranged between them. Jimmy Larkins will meet the winner for $1,000 a side.

In an editorial on the proposed reform of the turf by Mr. Lorillard the Pittsburg Despatch observes that "any thorough reforms will have to be based on the same plan as the proverbial one with regard to trimming the dog's tail by cutting it off just behind the ears. When the turf is completely reformed there will not be enough of it left to warrant any further proceedings."

John Owen, jr., the young sprinter who made such a sensation at the Washington games of the Amateur Athletic union by running 100 yards in 9 4-5 seconds, is a wealthy young merchant of Detroit. Owen is 25 years old, and races solely for the glory that is to be won with success. Although he has been contesting for only a short time his work has been remarkable. The 10 second record for 100 yards has stood for many years until he smashed it at Washington. He had been trained by the best professional sprinters in the United States, and gets away from the scratch with marvelous quickness.

The great horse Ontario's seven foot jump was a phenomenal performance; when Roseberry cleared 7 feet 1 inch, Ontario was respected, but not wondered at, and now Ontario is forgotten (unless he redeems the record) and Filemaker, a big, raw-boned brown gelding, reigned supreme with a record of 7 feet 1¼ inches for a brief day, when Roseberry took the laurels again for 7 feet 1⅝ inches. Speaking of Filemaker's performance a Chicago paper says:

It was a grand bit of work, and he carried nearly 160 pounds, while Roseberry did not have more than 135 pounds up. The enthusiasm was intense when the gallant old brown cleared the big bar, and the whole building rang with shouts.

It was the last event of the evening, and was announced as a contest to beat Roseberry's record of last year—6 feet 11¾ inches. There were three entries: Morehouse & Pepper's dun gelding Roseberry, ridden by Tim Blong; Morehouse & Pepper's Maud, ridden by Willie Wilson, and H. J. MacFarland's brown gelding Filemaker, ridden by Tom Potter. The jumping began low down in order to warm up the horses.

All three horses were jumping in good form, the little mare Maud being very neat, and provoking cheers at every jump. Filemaker hit the bar at 5 feet 9 inches, but cleared it at the second trial. At 6 feet 3 inches Roseberry failed at the first attempt, but got over at the second. Filemaker flew it at the first trial. Maud refused it once, but cleared the bar in good style the second time, and the jump was then raised to 6 feet 5 inches.

Roseberry broke the two top bars at the first attempt, but made it at the second. Filemaker also broke a rail on his first trial, but the second time cleared it neatly. Maud retired and the jump was put up to 6 feet and 7 inches. Roseberry went over, but in a very slovenly way, while Filemaker cleared it in great style, and the bars were raised to 6 feet 9½ inches. This time Roseberry broke half a dozen rails at the first attempt, and did the same on the second trial. The third time, however, he went over like a bird. Filemaker cleared it grandly at the first attempt, amid wild cheers. The bar was now raised only half an inch, but Roseberry failed to clear it after five trials, breaking two or three rails each time. Filemaker cleared it beautifully at the first attempt. Roseberry was now out of it, and the jump was put up to 7 feet 1¼ inches for Filemaker to beat the record. The excitement was intense as the noble horse came at the jump. Potter sent him at it and the old horse responded gamely. He could not quite get up though and crash went the two top rails. Every one was excited when Potter walked the horse up to the starting point. Old Filemaker seemed a little fidgety, and Potter turned him rather short. Grim and determined looked the rider as he sent the brown at the jump, with a cheering shout, a tight grip of the knees, and one cut of the whip, he raised the old horse at the bars, and gallantly did the animal respond. With ears picked forward Filemaker rose at the mighty barrier, and as he flew over it a yell burst from the thousands assembled that nearly lifted the roof from the building. Potter was carried away on the shoulders of the crowd.

SAVE YOUR EYESIGHT.

Take Advantage of the Present Opportunity. ---Be Wise in time.

The fact that there is no resident professional optician this side of San Francisco is one reason why Mr. Seward's visit to this city and Portland, Oregon, has been so successful. In Victoria, aside from the large number of near-sighted, far-sighted, or old sighted eyes, Mr. Seward has succeeded in correcting some twenty-five especially complicated defective cases, who have never before been able to have correct glasses adjusted, at any price. A portion of this work has been somewhat expensive, but the result has been satisfactorily in all cases. A large number of prominent and influential citizens of Victoria have kindly volunteered the use of their names as reference. These, however, will not be published, as Mr. Seward's work speaks for itself and no further reference is now necessary. He has demonstrated, to the satisfaction of all concerned, his ability in adapting his superior lenses to any and all kinds of defective eyesight, and it remains only to state that he will leave for New York in a few weeks, and would therefore urge upon those intending to call the importance of doing so without delay. Office, corner Yates and Douglas streets, over Cochrane & Munn's drug store.

A CARD.

In answer to the number of communications from Vancouver, New Westminster, and Nanaimo, Mr. Seward begs to state that, in consequence of limited time, he will not be able to visit any of the above cities. He must be in New York in a few weeks.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT.

(Before the Chief Justice.)

Arbitrate or Fight.

Some time ago we were assured that this was the position of the "Behring Sea Question." The Press of the United States, and that of England as well, clamored for "fight," while the sensible men of both nations justly claimed that "arbitration" was the honorable mode, and the only consistent course for two Christian nations to pursue. Calmess and forbearance we believe are characteristics of the great Anglo-Saxon family, who should at all times go hand in hand as leaders of the world's destinies. There are, however, times and occasions when not only Americans and Englishmen, but Canadians as well, should throw arbitration to the winds, and fight for self, family and country.

These occasions arise, unfortunately too often, when we are unprepared and unguarded, and as a consequence we are left to the mercy of dangerous and subtile foes, who are at all times cruel and relentless.

Our special object in this article is to show Canadians, who value their own lives, the happiness of their families, and the welfare of our nation, the great necessity of immediate action in the direction of fighting foes which are to be found in every household. These foes are worse and more dangerous than would be an invading army of foot and horse soldiers.

"What are these dangerous and relentless foes?" many will ask. They are nervousness, and overworked brain, insomnia or sleeplessness, dizziness, a run-down constitution, imperfect circulation, dyspepsia and indigestion.

They are horrible to contemplate; they are more to be dreaded than sword and cannon.

From these terrible troubles that fearful disease insanity is often brought on, and the stricken one doomed to end his life in an institution repulsive to all.

Reader, you are brought face to face with solemn facts, and unless you are prepared to fight these diseases at once, and with the proper weapon, the fault is your own, and you must bear the awful consequences.

Paine's Celery Compound is the great weapon, the great rock of defence which you must use in your battle against sickness and disease. It has proven a tower of strength and a strong arm to thousands in Canada when attacked and laid low by disease; it has restored them to health, strength and renewed vigor, and showered blessings in all communities.

Paine's Celery Compound in the cure of disease is like unto the military gun, known as the Mitrailleuse, which fires several shots at once towards the enemy.

Paine's Celery Compound when taken and used honestly will at once eradicate all ailments from which the victim suffers.

Canadians, this great boon is within your reach from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and no household should be without it.

THE DREXEL BROTHERS.

Gath Gossips About Philadelphia's Multi-Millionaire Bankers.

The house of Drexel arose in Philadelphia somewhat earlier than that of Jay Cooke, commencing with a Tyrolese artist who painted pictures and shaved notes and currency. Upon careful foundations, writes "Gath" in the Cincinnati Enquirer, he raised a house which at the decay of Jay Cooke seized upon many great occasions and, drawing in such men as Mr. Morgan, of New England, began to play a vast intermediate part between railroads and investment and general financial directions. The fortunes of the three Drexel brothers, though not as large as some fortunes in New York City, have been in the aggregate probably $25,000,000 to $30,000,000. These bankers were wise in drawing young blood into their departments and buying precedence as princes formerly bought great military commanders. The Drexels have recently absorbed the Stock Exchange of Philadelphia into their huge marble block which they have put up on Chestnut street opposite the old Hall of Congress, and be-

"I want to protest against this twaddle about the poor shop-girl. I have heard it ring in my ears for weeks, day and night. And from people who know nothing about our business and really care less. I am tired of being pointed out as a weary shop-girl. I am tired of being asked the question by people whom I never saw before and probably will never see again until I run up against them in the next world, and then I shall expect them to say to me: 'You poor, tired thing. You look too weary to twang your harp.'

"Let me tell these sympathetic creatures something. We do get tired. So do the bank clerks, and I suppose there is such a thing as newspaper men tiring. But they are never singled out as we are as objects of sympathy. You may think, I am ungrateful. I am not. I don't want any so-called sympathy from strangers. Besides, I would like to inform the sympathizers that the average shop-girl of to-day is better off for being such. She is well treated by her employer. Of course she has to work. She is not employed as a picture. I know one manager in Chicago who never allows a girl in search of work to leave his place without one day's pay in her pocket. If she is worthy she may be retained. During the crowded season just passed I know of many shop-girls who were not only given extra pay and furnished with lunches and dinners, but given valuable presents, and their home people were, in some instances, remembered by managers and employers. Many did not receive such consideration, and I have no doubt that in a majority of such cases they did not receive it because they did not merit it. If the shop-girl attends to her business she will get along all right and won't need so much sympathy."

THE DOUGLAS CHILDREN.

THEY ARE TO REMAIN AS ROMAN CATHOLICS.

Judgments by the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice McCreight—The Verdict Based Upon Precedents Which are Quoted and Explained.

The much looked for judgment in the case of Harris vs. Douglas was given late Monday afternoon, it being possible only to publish the mere result. Following is his lordship the Chief Justice's decision, in which the other judges concur:

This case was argued before us, on the part of the plaintiff, mainly on the ground that the defendant had misconducted herself in her trust for so long a time that shd had acquired a right to continue her wrong-doing; and on the other side, that the plaintiff, the defendant's co-guardian, had displayed such laches and acquiescence that he could no longer insist upon his right to interfere. But these are not at all motives which induced the Court to act or refrain from acting. The only ground on which we should interfere at all to direct or correct the religious education of the infants is, their own well-being, as understood by the Court, and according to rules which have been adopted by the experience of many generations.

It is now unnecessary to inquire the reasons upon which those rules are founded. It is now well settled that infants are to be educated in the religion selected by the father; and if none be expressly or by direct implication selected, then in the religion of the father. Here there cannot surely be a stronger implication of the father's intention than his appointment to the office of guardian three persons of the congregation of the Reformed Episcopal church, whose very ratio existendi is a protest against the communion of Rome. Upon this, however, Stourton v. Stourton, 26 L. J. Ch., and, perhaps Hill v. Hill, 31 L. J. Ch., have grafted a notable distinction, viz., that where the infant is being educated in another form of Christianity than his father's, and his education has proceeded so far as that the infant has received decided impressions, which it would on the whole be dangerous to attempt to eradicate, then the attempt is not to be made, and the education is to be allowed to proceed, although in a church differing from that of the father.

In this view, the lapse of time since the conversion of the mother, during which the infants have been left under her uncontrolled direction, becomes very material to be considered; not as affecting the right of the plaintiff, the other guardian, to correct what was undoubtedly a wrong in the first instance, but as enabling the court to form some notion of the strength of the novel impressions on the infant mind. The age of the infants is also to be considered; for an impression which at 13 or 14 it might be dangerous to move, might be attacked perhaps safely at 7 or 8 years. The laches of the plaintiff does not affect these points. If the plaintiff had, until last month, been very ignorant of the fact of the mother's conversion in March, 1887, and of the children being educated ever since under R. C. priests, yet the impression of three and a half years education on the child's mind, and the risk of any attempt to remove it would be the same. The plaintiff's knowledge of and acquiescence in the education of the infants has really nothing to do with the question of the impression on the infants' minds. The age at which children, and indeed all human beings, imbibe theological tenets varies considerably. Lord Macaulay is said to have written a very fair resume of the history and doctrines of Christianity for the use of missionaries engaged in converting the natives of Bengal at 7 years old. But the window of his nursery looked out on Clapham Common. Mrs. Hutchinson—but she lived in the times of Laud and Prynne and Bastwick—is also stated to have taken at a similar age a lively interest in theology.

In Stourton vs. Stourton the infant was 9½ years old, and his new faith was protected. In Hawkesworth vs. Hawkesworth the age was 8 years, and the new doctrines were permitted to be attacked. In every case, I suppose, it is for the court to judge. We therefore had an interview with the infants. Speaking for myself alone, I may say that my principal object in seeking an interview was to ascertain, not so much the particular tenets which the infants might hold with greater or less tenacity—though something might be learnt as to that, subject always to the suspicion of "cramming;"—but mainly to see if I could form an opinion whether the infants were in fact, notwithstanding their tender years, susceptible of holding decided views on church matters at all. And in my judgment the interview fulfilled both requirements. The infants referred with evident satisfaction and confidence to some matters to which Protestants, especially in that denomination to which their deceased father and all his family belonged, most strongly object. And they also shewed, in my judgment, quite sufficient capacity to embrace distinctive tenets; and it was impossible to resist the conclusion that having been left 3½ years under the uncontrolled instructions of the defendant and her spiritual advisers, all her instincts, the affection of a mother, the zeal and enthusiasm of a convert, would almost necessarily create and color all the religious views of the children in a very decided manner. And then the reasoning of the Lords Justices in Stourton vs. Stourton, and Lord Hatherley in Hill vs Hill becomes so directly applicable that I shrink from running counter to such eminent judges. I apprehend it is too late for the court now to interfere and restore the education of these children to what undoubtedly is its proper channel. It is to be considered that these infants are somewhat older than in those cases, and so may be taken to have more established views; the eldest here wants but three months of being twelve years of age, the youngest is a month or two past ten.

I quite agree with the observations of V. C. Wickens in Hawkesworth vs. Hawkesworth, as to the possible evil effects of this decision, following as it does the lines of Stourton v. S, "It may lead widowed mothers in breach of their duty, and to the great injury of their children, to introduce them prematurely into an atmosphere of theological controversy, than which nothing can be more injurious to the mind and heart of a child, and this, it will be observed, for the purpose of convincing them that their dead father died in deadly sin." It is the most sacred duty of a testamentary guardian to educate his ward according to the rules of law. If his conscience or his intellect rebel against these rules, so that he cannot, he thinks, conscientiously obey them, it is his duty to resign his trust. Nothing could show worse faith than knowingly to take advantage of a legal position as guardian, in order to commit an illegal act. Here, I am happy to say, that there is no appearance of any concealment on the part of the defendant, and there is no doubt in my mind that she has acted ignorantly and solely followed the dictates of her conscience.

I follow Stourton vs. Stourton, therefore, with some misgiving. But it was decided so long ago as 1857, and has frequently been cited, and has never been departed from; and I do not think that we are at liberty to do so. I say nothing as to their scheme for the future education of the infants—that will be dealt with at the hearing, when the concluding observations of the Chief Justice in Stourton vs. Stourton will probably receive due consideration.

McCreight, J.—Mrs. Douglas, the appellant, says her husband never partook of the sacraments of the Reformed Episcopal church, nor of any other Protestant denomination since their marriage; seldom attended the Reformed Episcopal church, and that the last instance of attendance at a place of worship was in England at a Roman Catholic church. His will is silent as to the religion in which he might have wished his sons to be brought up. Mr. Harris, joint guardian with Mrs. Douglas, appears to have been indifferent on the subject from March, 1887, till August, 1890, a period of nearly 3½ years, though according to Mrs. Douglas' affidavit, and not denied, well aware at the time of herself and sons being baptized into the Roman Catholic faith. She further says that with the knowledge that since the date of her embracing the Roman Catholic faith she had been bringing up her children as Roman Catholics the plaintiff, Harris, and his co-trustee, had made her a yearly allowance of $1000 towards the education, support and maintenance of her children, and that neither Harris nor his co-trustees ever, until the proceedings in August last, in this year, complained to her of her rearing her children in the Roman Catholic faith. She further says that for some time previous to her embracing the Catholic faith, and ever since then, her boys have been regularly instructed in the faith and morals of the Church, both by herself and the priests of the Church, and her said boys now cheerfully comply with the rules and instructions of the Church, and have been taught to believe that the Catholic and Roman faith is the only true faith, and from her knowledge of her children that they are steadfast in that belief, and that she is quite certain that to disturb their convictions would tend to make them unbelievers in Christianity; that her son James Andrew is well versed in the Catechism and took his first Communion on the 25th of May last. No attempt is made to contradict these sworn statements, which must be taken to be true. There was no cross-examination of Mrs. Douglas on her affidavit. In Stourton v. Stourton, at 8 De. G. M. and G., at p. 771, Lord Justice Turner says as follows: "The principles by which this Court is governed in cases of this nature where there are no testamentary guardians are not, I apprehend, open to any serious doubt. When infants become wards of the Court the first and paramount duty of the Court unquestionably is to consult the well being of the infants, and in discharging that duty the Court recognizes no religious distinctions." Now, considering this passage in the judgment of the Lord Justice, and referring to the facts as stated in this affidavit of Mrs. Douglas, and not in the least contradicted as to the faith of the children, it seems plain that their well being and the consequent duty of the Court requires that they should not be disturbed in their religious faith, and that the responsibility of so doing may be very serious.

It must, moreover, be borne in mind that a Protestant education in this case is likely to lead to alienation from their mother, and perhaps removal from her custody. In re Clarke, 21 ch. D. 828, Mr. Justice Kay says: "If I were now to direct that the son should be brought up as a Protestant, I must either take him out of the custody of his mother, which would be in every way a great misfortune, or I must give directions which would make the mother's household a divided household," and in that case it was directed that the child should be brought up in the faith of its Catholic mother.

In the case of Hill v. Hill, 10 w. Rep., and 31 L.J., Ch. of Lord Heatherly, then Vice-Chancellor, lays much stress on the same circumstance, and adds: "Besides this there would be great danger of placing the children in an oscillating state between the instruction received by them at school, and the ideas derived from association with their mother during the holidays."

In the case of Stourton v. Stourton, at P. 763, and D.G.M and G., Lord Justice Knights Bruce lays considerable stress on the same circumstances, and in the same case Turner, Lord Justice, at p. 772, says: "If the wishes of the father cannot be carried into effect without sacrificing what the court, acting without bias, judges to be for the well being of the children, those wishes cannot be attended to." Here we have not even the wishes of the deceased father, who seems to have been (as Mr. Harris was also for years) indifferent, or at all events not auxious as to the religion in which the children were to be brought up. His (Mr. Harris') position as testamentary guardian, to use the language of the Court of Appeal, in re Agar Ellis, 10 Chan. Div., at p. 74, is a case of mere and pure trust, which is essentially under the jurisdiction of the Court, and under a jurisdiction always exercised with the widest judicial discretion," and evidently not so as to interfere with the well-being of the children, "the first and paramount duty of the Court" as expressed by Lord Justice Turner.

Again, if the father had been auxious that the children should be brought up in the Reformed Episcopal Church, I think he would in his will have said so.

I think the order of Mr. Justice Drake, of 4th November (this month), cannot stand.

My learned brothers and myself, according to the course adopted by the English courts in several cases, have had an interview in private with the children, and the result appears to me to be that the statements contained in the paragraph of Mrs. Douglas' affidavit, which I have last quoted, and regarding their religious belief, are not overdrawn; and in conclusion I have only to quote a portion of the judgment of Lord Justice Turner, in his judgment Stourton v. Stourton, quoted at p. 772. He says, "That the minds of children are capable at a very early age of receiving very strong impressions upon matters of religion, as well as upon other matters, cannot be denied, and having seen the infant plaintiff in the case and considered what passed at our interview with him, I am satisfied that his mind has received impressions, and strong impressions too, upon religious subjects which are at variance with the faith which his father professed. I have felt bound to consider, therefore, what might be the result of disturbing those impressions. It was urged at the bar that the opinions of a child so young could not be fixed, and that the impressions which this child has received might be removed by a different course of instruction and different associations. It might be so; but on the other hand, may it not be that the impressions which have been formed might lead to the instruction being received with carelessness or indifference, or which would certainly not be less dangerous, or less destructive to the character of this boy, with affected acquiescence? May it not be that that the attempt to force upon this child a different faith might end in unsettling his existing impressions, and substituting no fixed impressions in their place? I much fear that it would be so. I think it the more probable from the unhappy differences of opinion upon religious subjects between the mother (on whom the boy would naturally lean), and the father's family, who would as naturally endeavor to plant in the mind of the child opinions different from those which the mother entertains, but whether the consequences would or would not be such as I have pointed out, the danger of Mrs Stourtons being removed from the guardianship being followed by such consequences is one to which I dare not venture to expose this child."

Every word of this passage (names only being changed) applies to the present case, and as the other Lord Justice in substance makes use of the same reasons I must decide accordingly. The order of Mr. Justice Drake, that the children are not to be taken out of the jurisdiction, I think should not at present be disturbed. I observe the Lord Justice Knight Bruce, in Stourton's case, says: "The Lady (Mrs. Stourton) will understand that her son is not again to be taken out of the jurisdiction without the leave of the Court." I think the costs in this case may properly be paid out of the estate.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

VICTORIA VS. VANCOUVER.

Interesting Debate Last Evening as to the Seat of the Provincial University.

The Young People's Society in connection with the First Presbyterian church met last evening in the school room, Mr. J. Cochrane, president, in the chair. The attendance was a large one and was rendered memorable from the fact that it broke up in favor of a dog fight which commenced towards the close of the proceedings. The subject of discussion was "That Vancouver is a more desirable location for a university than Victoria." Messrs. Hastie, McCulloch and Jackson upheld the motion and argued in favor of Vancouver. It was contended that the custom did not obtain of having the universities in the great commercial centres, and as Victoria was both the capital and centre of commerce of British Columbia, she could not ask for the university. The question of population was brought forward in support of this contention, it being argued that as the bulk of the population of this province was to be found on the Mainland, the convenience of that population should be considered and the university established there. The fight was pluckily carried on by both sides.

Those in favor of Victoria as the seat of the university were Messrs. Douglas, Grant and Cochrane. They refuted the principal plea in their opponent's argument, and cited instances such as Montreal and Toronto in Canada; cities in the States and the old world where the university had its seat amid capital and labor, population and wealth, showing that Victoria being the commercial centre and the capital, is the most desirable place for the university. Here are to be found the money, the people and all the solidity of the Province. Victoria is identified with the establishment, rise and growth of the Province; her families can date back from the beginning; Vancouver has not had time to raise a native boy or girl who has made a name as a man or woman in the Province's affairs. Victoria can point to nearly all the men who have figured in public life here as belonging to her. The Jubilee hospital question is a proof of her fitness to carry the University colors. The opportunity to raise the sum stipulated by the Government was open to all the cities in the province. Victoria showed herself the mother and queen city by raising without difficulty the required sum. The question of a university was not spoken of by Vancouver till after Victoria men had effected the most difficult work attaching to it; viz. the legislation. The birth of Vancouver was incidental to the efforts of Victoria and New Westminster people who stipulated that the transcontinental road should be built before this province entered the federal union of Canada as a Dominion.

The vote was taken on the merits of the argument, not the question, and was decided almost unanimously in favor of Victoria as the seat of the university.

New Fog Signal.

It is the intention of the Department of Marine to erect a new fog signal at Race Rocks light station at an early date. Plans and specifications for an engine and boiler are to soon be got out, and tenders will no doubt be called for in a few weeks. Local manufacturers will have a chance to bid on the work.

For the Benefit of Creditors.

Boarders at the Brunswick Hotel were very disagreeably surprised this morning to find on arriving down stairs that the dining hall was not open, and that, according to the proprietor, they would have to find another boarding house. The cause of this was that A. Hodnett, proprietor of the house, assigned yesterday to S. F. McIntosh, for the benefit of his creditors. This course is a surprise to Mr. Hodnett's friends, all of whom thought he was doing well.

Not So Very Slow.

Victorians may have the name of being slow, but nevertheless when occasion requires it they can get a move on just as well as outsiders. This fact is evident by the rapidity with which Galpin's new block on Yates street is reaching skyward. When Messrs. Humber & Sons received the contract they made known their intention of finishing the block before the winter weather commenced, and they will no doubt be successful. A large gang of bricklayers have been put to work, and 8,000 bricks are being laid daily, besides which the stone work is being gone on with.

An Unfaithful Steward.

About a month ago, a young man named Alex. Drummond, arrived in Victoria and went to work as driver for Jno. Wilson, baker, of Yates street. Drummond worked for Mr. Wilson for about two months, and then left and went to work for Mr. Richmond, of the Victoria Dairy, at the Gorge. During the time he was working for Mr. Wilson, small sums of money were missed from the till and large sums were paid to him by customers. These sums he forgot to pay over, but was induced to pay $18.75 back to Mr. Wilson when threatened with arrest. This amount, Mr. Wilson says, is only a small portion of what his customers claim they paid to Drummond, and ever since some people who have been presented with bills claim that they paid Drummond. Mr. Wilson, however, hushed up the matter, and much to his regret, allowed Mr. Richmond to employ him. The latter gentleman was laid up for some time and claims that when he returned to business he also found that he had been treated like Mr. Wilson. Drummond was last seen on Saturday and it is not known whether he is still in town or not.

Marriage Not a Failure.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lester have not found, in their fifty years of wedded life that marriage is a failure, or they would not have so happily celebrated the jubilee of their wedding day as they did Sunday.

The New Methodist Church.

Special efforts are being made to ensure the entry of the Methodist congregation into the new church by Christmas. The work of preparing the spacious school room for this purpose proceeds apace and there is every expectation that Christmas services will be held there. The choir will hold their first practice for the occasion this evening.

Starts the Series.

The Comus club will this evening open their series of winter nights dances by a hop in Philharmonic hall. The club has now fifty members and as almost all are active ones Harmony hall was found inadequate, and so a larger hall had to be obtained. Philharmonic will no doubt suit them better, and members are looking forward to a good time this evening.

Several Reasons Why.

Why is Northfield coal the best?
1. It is the hardest.
2. Gives a hotter fire and consumes the least fuel.
3. It does not clinker.
4. Free from stone and slate.
5. It makes a cheerful fire burning free and clear.

Will Sue for Damages.

Mr. John Hill, postmaster of South Cedar, whose horse was killed last week by falling through a bridge, will in all probability sue the Government for damages. The animal, a fine mare, valued at $250, trotted into the hole in the dark and broke her shoulder. The occupants of the carriage were also thrown out. Besides the financial loss of the mare, Mr. Hill's family feel very much grieved, as the animal was a favorite, and one they were all very much attached to.

Fast Time.

The Union Pacific vestibuled train leaving Portland at 7.00 a.m., has Pullman sleeping and dining cars. Free Pullman tourist cars, and free reclining chair cars to Omaha, Kansas City and Chicago, without change. Steamers leave Victoria daily (except Sunday.) For tickets to any point east, north and south, call on or address Morris J. Bissell, 100 Government St., Victoria, B. C.

Better than a Directory.

Now that all the real estate men have shown themselves sufficiently enterprising as to provide themselves with a first-class map of Victoria, time can be spared to serve private people. Hibben & Co.'s map of the city and surrounding district should be in every business house, and also in every private dwelling. For the latter purpose the map has been gotten out on a smaller scale, price 50 cents. It is better than a directory, and much handier in finding one's way round town.

Police Court Notes.

There was an unusual quietness in the police court this morning, there being neither a spectator nor a prisoner in the room to listen to the cases considered by Mr. Edwin Johnson, S.M., who presided. The only case he had to deal with was one wherein a property owner pleaded guilty to the charge of allowing a pile of earth to remain on the street. The dirt had been removed, however, and $2 with the costs of summons was the only rent the city wanted for the use of their street.

Morris Marks, a store keeper on Store street, laid an information against J. Luken, charging him with assault. The case will be heard tomorrow.

An Improvement.

Although not a large company, Gorton's minstrels proved to be well able to keep the audience at the Victoria, last evening, in good humor. Minstrels as a rule are just about the same, but last night's performance was above the average. Jake Welby, Hank Goodman and H. J. Yorkey, made splendid end-men, especially the former, who immediately made friends with the audience. The songs were all well rendered, Hank Goodman making a decided hit in "Wasn't it Tough," while every one of the vocalists won well deserved applause. The clog dancing was very graceful and the performers were frequently recalled. The Great Mazourka clog was particularly pretty, as was evident by the marked appreciation of those present. The Elliott Bros., in their songs and dances, and the club swinging of Rudolph Schroder, were also well received. In the whole, the company was superior to many others that have visited Victoria, and they will merit another large house this evening.

Off for Their Honeymoon.

The southbound train last evening brought down from Somenos a couple that were perhaps happier than any on board. They were Mr. Joe Macdonald and bride, nee Miss Eleanora F. Smythe, who had been married in St. Peter's church, Somenos, during the afternoon. The bride, the only daughter of the late Hon. Wm. Smythe, was dressed in a neat traveling suit and during the ceremony was supported by Miss Borthwick. Mr. Geo. Garesche acted as best man. On account of the absence of Hon. John Robson, the bride's guardian, the duty of giving her away devolved upon Ald. A. J. Smith of this city. Rev. J. A. Leakey, of St. Peter's church, Somenos, performed the ceremony that made the happy couple man and wife. The popularity of Mr. and Mrs. Macdonald was plainly displayed by the congratulations that poured in after the ceremony and also by the large number of presents, among which was a handsome piano, a set of drawing room furniture and a handsome book and writing desk combined, etc. The Premier was boarded last evening and the newly married couple left for Portland, where the honeymoon will be spent.

WHICH WINS?

McLean Leaves his Shell and Goes Ashore at the Bridge.

The shell race between Bush and McLean came off this afternoon over the harbor course. The men pulled well together at the start, but just this side of Point Ellice Bridge the men were close to the city side, McLean inshore. A moment afterwards McLean was seen to stop pulling, and he then paddled to the shore and got out of his shell. Bush kept on over the course. It is presumed a foul or something of the sort will be claimed.

A WONDERFUL CHART.

Mr. Grant, the Evangelist, Displays the World's History at a Glance.

Mr. Grant had a very intelligent and closely interested audience at the Courtney street church last evening. A remarkably interesting feature of Mr. Grant's lectures is a copy of the famous world's chart, compiled by Sebastian C. Adams, of Salem, Ore., and exhibited at the Centennial exposition at Philadelphia. The original cost $20,000 to lithograph, after taking ten years of Mr. Adams' life in preparation. It is a wonderful piece of work, giving a concise, yet remarkably lucid history of the world's progress from the creation. It shows the beginning to the Flood, the rise and growth of kings and kingdoms, the location of their territory, and the duration of their reign. Mr. Grant lectures from this to show the fulfilment of prophecy as based on the accuracy of history. If history is correct, and the events of history as prophesied have come about, then is the Bible true. Mr. Grant handles his subject well and imparts to it a deal of attractiveness. His chart, from which he has been lecturing for 15 years, rivets and retains the interest of the listener, as the map does that of the child at school. This great mirror of history is 68 feet long by 7 feet wide. To-night, Mr. Grant will lecture in the same place, and as he has now gained the interest and sympathy of Sunday school teachers the audiences will be much larger than before. It is not so much a sermon as a lecture of invaluable instruction to the teacher who has charge of young minds, to the Christian and even to those with doubts of the authenticity of the great truths of Christianity. Indeed it is the latter class who would reap the greatest benefit.

And Now Comes Gillett

and says that it is time there was a good Baking Powder, and that his Imperial Cream Tartar Baking Powder is far superior to all others.

Change of Proprietors.

The Ship Inn, on Wharf street, has been purchased by Messrs. James Brown and Hugh Griffiths, well known in Victoria, from Mr. J. Meldram. Mr. Brown is so well known in our city as a first-class bartender that it only need be said of the new firm that they will keep the best brands of liquors and cigars to be found on the Island. Courteous treatment should merit a fair share of patronage. nov18-1w

Another Company Will Try.

The Free Press states that another company is being organized to work the Newcastle Island stone quarry. This quarry has been run at different times by good companies, but for some reason or other they do not stick to it. The San Francisco Mint and other buildings on the coast were built of stone taken out of it, and architects and contractors pronounce the stone to be of splendid quality.

Monopolized by Sports.

That portion of Victoria, known as "the corner," has during the last week been pretty well monopolized by boat racers and those interested in sport, much to the inconvenience of pedestrians, especially ladies and business men, who do not care to have to elbow their way along the streets. "The corner" is crowded every afternoon, and many prefer taking the road to the sidewalk, or else they go around a couple of blocks to get out of the way. A blue uniform might keep a passage way clear.

To My Friends and Patrons.

Having purchased the interest of Mr. W. H. Pennock, my late partner in the business of dealers in diamonds, jewelery and silverware, lately carried on in Victoria as Pennock & Clayton, I beg to announce that I shall in future carry on said business and that large additions, both to present large stock and to the staff of skilled workmen, will be made. Every attention to sales, manufactures and repairs, will be given to all whom may favor me with their order. Being myself a practical jeweller all manufactures and repairs will pass under my personal supervision, and I guarantee satisfaction. I solicit a visit to my establishment. Thanking one and all for past favors, and requesting a continuance thereof,

I am, respectfully,

At Calvary Church.

A very interesting time was spent by the Calvary church young people yesterday evening when an excellent programme of music, readings and recitations was rendered. Next week Mr. John F. Norris will give an essay on "Victoria criticised."

Will Be Better Soon.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. J. J. Daley, of this city, met with a painful accident in Port Townsend, while he was waiting for the steamer to come home. He saw a runaway horse coming down the street with two little children in the buggy. He succeeded in stopping the horse, but in so doing was thrown down and received painful injuries in the side. He is doing well to-day, and will be around again before long.

Faith in Store Street.

The work of tearing down the old wooden buildings on Store street between the Janion's block and the E. & N. depot, is going on apace. Measurements are being taken of the lot and the work of construction of a big three story brick block by Mr. Turner will soon be gone on with. Mr. Turner has great faith in Store street property, and says it will be a busy business street in a few years.

Y. M. I. Rehearsal.

A full dress rehearsal of "Robert Macaire" will be given at the Victoria Theatre Wednesday next by the members of the Y. M. I., who have the play under process of perfection. The different ones who are to take part are determined to become letter perfect, and as the object of the entertainment is to help raise funds to pay for the new St. Andrew's cathedral, there is no doubt but a big house will welcome the production of "Robert Macaire."

Movement of Freight.

Shipments to Mainland and Northern ports continue to be large, and all the steamers are kept busy handling freight.

The Yosemite will take to Vancouver to-morrow 40 tons of glass via Brodick Bay.

A lot of machinery and general freight is being put on to a scow at the C.P.N. dock for shipment to Cowichan, for Hewitt & McIntyre.

The Premier last evening brought over 364 cases canned goods and a lot of general merchandise.

The schooner Delta is taking on a miscellaneous cargo for Vancouver.

Both the steamers Danube and Louise will have large consignments for the North this week.

Discovery at Rat Portage.

The Rat Portage correspondent of the Free Press telegraphs:—"One of the most interesting gold discoveries that was ever made in the Lake of the Woods or any other mining region, was found Wednesday on the Ben Harrison lode, owned by Captain Johnson, and now leased to R. A. Harris and Dr. Franklin, of Michigan. The ore was tested, and gave respectively from a five-foot vein $420.68 and a second-class £24.79 per ton. The vein is situated between Norman and Keewatin, and is in the adjoining municipality of Rat Portage. It was but eight inches wide on the surface, and gave but 88 cents per ton. At three feet down it gave at the reduction works by H. K. Powers $14.42. Now it is ten feet in depth and five feet in width, and yesterday gave the above astonishing figures.

One guess will be allowed for every $5 worth of goods purchased. The shot will be counted by a disinterested committee of three on New Year's day, when the prizes will be awarded.

A TERRIBLE FALL.

Young Edward Wriglesworth Drops Forty Feet Onto a Floor.

Shortly after one o'clock this afternoon Mr. Edward Wriglesworth, a young man of 17, son of Mr. J. Wriglesworth, fell from a lofty scaffold at the St. Andrew's Cathedral, and struck on the plank floor forty feet below.

Kind hands picked him up and tenderly conveyed the limp form to his father's residence near by, and Dr. Hanington was hastily summoned, as in spite of the fearful fall there was still life in the young man. The doctor's examination showed that no bones were broken, but internal injuries were evident, although no bleeding was detected. All that could be done to make the sufferer easy was attended to, but the young man's life hangs by a thread, and it will be to-morrow before an opinion can be safely given as to the probable result. The young man's family and friends feel the blow keenly, as Edward was a general favorite, and all hope for the best.

The accident occurred while the young man was wheeling a barrowload of bricks along one of the upper scaffolds. He is an apprentice to the bricklaying trade, and was employed on the new cathedral when the accident happened.

SUCH A JOKE!
Cameron has beaten himself this time. He's sold me goods $2.00 too cheap. I know it, because I priced the same line of goods at another store before going to Cameron's. Ha! ha! ha! ha! he! he! he! he! ho! ho!
THE JOKE IS that our much tickled man has paid Cameron's usual price, which is always lower than elsewhere.
The Man that's Beat is the man that has been paying two prices so long that when he gets a fair deal he thinks it's all a mistake.
WHEN IT STRIKES HIM
that, instead of beating us $2.00 now, he's been beaten heretofore on every trade, you'll see that laugh strikes in like colic. But he'll stick to us now he's tried us.
LARGE STOCK, GOOD VALUE.
